Position Statement

Professional Accountability of the Midwife

Background

The ICM International Definition of the Midwife (2023) states that a "midwife is recognised as a responsible and accountable professional, who works in partnership with women and gender diverse people to give the necessary support, care, and advice during pregnancy, labour, and the postpartum period to conduct births on the midwife's own responsibility and to provide care for the newborn and the infant."

The ICM Essential Competencies of Midwifery Practice (2019) make clear that midwives assume responsibility and accountability for their practice, applying up-to-date knowledge and skills, and are responsible and accountable for clinical decisions.

Position

ICM recognises that midwives, as defined in the 'Definition of the Midwife', have a duty of care to the women and newborns they care for, and for their own actions and professional advice. This accountability extends to those actions taken on the advice and orders of others.

For midwives to be accountable for their own actions, they must:

- Have acquired the knowledge and skills to competently carry out actions as part of a recognised professional education programme.
- Have the opportunity to access continuous educational programmes for regularly updating and expanding the knowledge and skills that are the basis of competent midwifery practice.
- Be aware of the obligation not to undertake actions for which they have not received the necessary education to achieve competency.
